Birth of a New Germany.

Evidently the ailies are not acutely concerned over what is taking place in Germany these days. Certainly the dispatches telling of rioting and bloodshed and peril to the present government are read in this country with only a mild interest. The general feeling seems to be that the German people are getting no more than they deserve for being such willing tools for the perpetration of the crimes of the imperial government,

When the war ended little had happened to chasten the spirit of the Teutons. There had been some privation, particularly in the industrial districts, and there had been four years of prodigious toil and wastage. On the whole, however, the people came out of the conflict in much the same state of mind as that in which they entered it. The war was a national adventure, not one fought for a principle, and the disposition when it turned out badly, was to escape the consequences by the easiest When German solders crossed the Rhine recently they assured the people who turned out to greet them as heroes that they would soon be back, and the promise brought cheers. The German people still believed that war is a profitable business for the nation that is strong. In other words that national might is entitled to whatever it can get.

So long as that state of mind exists of course Germany will continue to be a menace to the peace of the world, no matter what its form of government. It will never qualify for membership in a league of nations till a new spirit, broader and more tolerant and more Christian, is born. Such a radical change can only come through adversity.

It would have been bester for Gormany if the allied armies. Some of the suffering that France has endured might have cleaned and purified the German soul. Escaping the extrema tribulation of armed invasion and destruction of property has only delayed the inevitable atonement. It must come eventually and a realization of the fact probably explains the complacency with which the upheaval now taking place beyond the Rhine is viewed by the rest of the world.

There is a common feeling the struggle is merely the outward evidence of the birth pains of a new and rea! democracy and a disposition to keep hands off till the delivery is completed.

Lumber Prices.

Horace F. Taylor, president of the National Wholesale Lumber Dealers' association, does, not believe that there will be any material reduction in present prices of lumber. In fact, he holds that the outlook indicates rather an increase than a decrease. In supporting this wlow he save:

The very clear majority of opinion we derive from representatives of the industry in all parts of the country, is in effect that there will be no further reduction in the cost of lumber for a long period, and that there is no safe ground, therefore, for postponing building in the hope of a price reduction in this material. We look upon the present rather quiet conditions as temporary only and due to industrial readjustment, soon to give place to very sound activity. The cost of making lumber offers no chance of reduction, both on account of materials and supplies, and the cost of labor which, it seems not only necessary but destrable to maintain at as nearly an adequate rate as possible in view of the present cost of living. In addition to the ordinary increase in demand that is expected, an unusual call for lumber for export to Europe will soon begin to have its effect on the situation. Logging conditions during the present winter have been unfavorable, particularly in the north, and lumber production will apparently be less than that of normal years for some time to come. There is only one possible conclusion based upon the opinion of those consulted and that is that as far as the lumber market is concerned, the present is an advantageous time to purchase,

Of course that is the trade view. In Mr. l'aylor's case, as in the case of other dealers in building material, the wish may be father of the prediction. And yet the reasons advanced are worth considering by those who are planuing improvements requiring lumber.

Building Industry and Freights.

During the week agitation for an immediate lifting of restrictive freight rates on building materials has been most determined. Representatives of the sand, gravel, stone and slag ludustries, and the cement manufacturers have appealed to the division of public works and construction development of the department of labor for assistance in the presentation of their case before the railroad administration.

Many of the contractors and builders reporting to the department of labor insist freight rates, more than any other factor, are holding back the more extensive building projects, especially in the central west. They submit that if there is to be an early resumption of general building and construction work, freight rates on sand, gravel, stone, slag and cement must be reduced and such shipping restrictions as were inaugurated to prevent the diversions from war use of building materials. must be withdrawn.

Despite present obstacles, building authorities express confidence that the spring and summer will witness an unusual amount of private buildings, especially on such projects as were forced to suspend during the war and which were then needed to accommodate business and factory expansions. These needs now are more pressing than ever and many of them can be deferred no longer, regardless of construction costs.

Robins' Distinction.

Is there any class or party, in or out of Russia, more radical than the Russian bolshevists? Most of the news and correspondence coming out of that unhappy country suggests a negative answer. And yet Raymond Robins testimony indicates that there is.

Mr. Robins holds that bolshevism had much to do with the undermining of the morale of the German army. When the German leaders saw how matters were going, he says, they it had been Hawally beaten to its knees by | started a backfire of anarchy to give the Russian soviets trouble and succeeded so well that matters in the domain of the former exar rapidly went from bad to worse and efforts of the allies to cooperate came to naught.

Having been on the ground it may have been possible for Mr. Robins to draw a distinction too fine to be appreciated by those less intimately associated with Russian affairs. He credits the bolshevists with being constructive, at least so far as intentions are concerned, and thus a shade whiter than simon pure anarchists.

In Washington, after the mayors had finished telling the governors that they knew nothing about industrial or labor problems, and the governors in turn had finished telling the mayors that they knew nothing about labor or industrial problems, the three-day conven-tion was adjourned and the learned gentlemen all went back to their respective states and cities, apparently satisfied.

Thus, as the historians may say, were our great reconstruction problems solved, follow-ing the world war.

Sir: Know what cittelings are? Well, neither did I at first. But to go on with the story I shall repeat what I heard in a local butcher shop the other evening. A colored lady was asked what she wanted and she an-swered: "About three pounds of chittelin's." That had me guessing until I saw the butcher bring them out and start wrapping them up When he had them wrapped up he said: "Any thing else?" to which the c. l. replied: gimme 'bout three pounds mo'."
